“The input of residents, businesses, and visitors traveling in the communities of Bruce County is essential to understand the need and demand for transit”, adds Warden Chris Peabody. “Council and Staff are eager to hear from you as we examine transit needs and consider the feasibility of different transit options in order to build plans for the future.”

Bruce County will also be undertaking Stakeholder Engagement Sessions in May with local municipalities and key groups and organizations. The objective of the Transit Demand and Feasibility Study is to review existing services, identify local travel needs, and develop a plan to address the needs identified. Please stay connected for announcements about future opportunities to provide further input on transit in the region.

Thank you for participating in shaping the future of the County. We look forward to hearing from you!
